

Personal Safety

What does personal safety mean to you?

You could consider:

- Different types of personal safety
- The importance of safety
- Who is responsible for safety
- The definition of personal safety

What is meant by
this term?

What is meant by
this term?

Personal Safety refers to the freedom from physical harm and threat of physical harm, and freedom from hostility, aggression, harassment, and devaluation by members of the academic community. Safety includes worry about being victimised as well as actual incidents.

What qualifies as harassment?

Why may someone
be victimised?

Physical Safety vs. Online Safety

Physical Safety	Online Safety
Road safety	Facebook privacy

Under each of the two headings, add points about the different aspects of safety which apply.

For example, Facebook privacy.

Physical Safety vs. Online Safety

Physical Safety	Online Safety
Road safety	Facebook privacy
Being safe at night	Location settings
Being safe in busy places	Sharing images online
Being safe when alone	Accepting friends on social media
Police presence	Knowing who you are talking to
Being safe in school

Do you think physical and online safety link?

Why?

Online Safety – Snapchat & Texting

Hands up – who has snapchat?

How many people do you
think use snapchat each day?

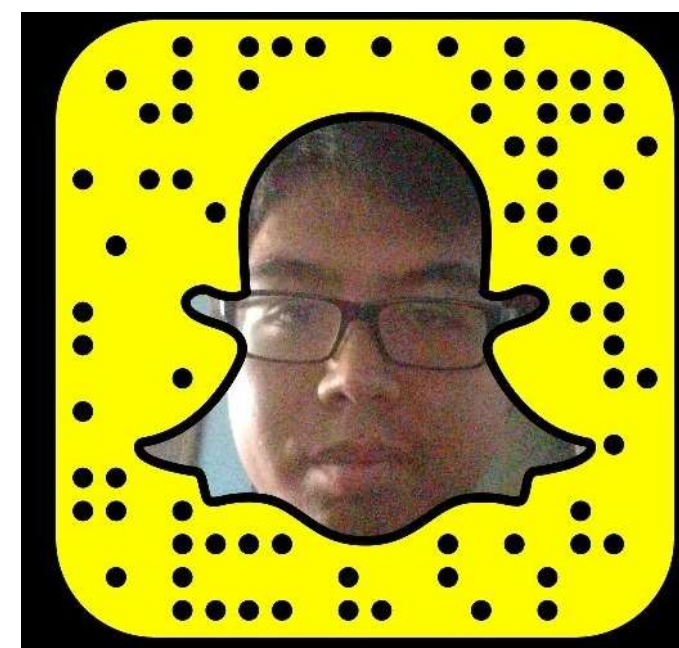

158 million people are using Snapchat every day

Which of these users would you trust the most?

Rank from 1 -5.

Be prepared to explain your answer.

What is sexting?

Snapchat and Sexting

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=2vSyp-swOdk>

As you are watching the video, think about:

- How sexting and snapchat link
- The dangers of sexting.

What are the implications of sexting?

FACTS about SEXTING

You COULD be put on the Sex Offenders Register which could affect all future employment

Sending a sexually explicit photo of someone under 18, is ILLEGAL, even if you are sending one of yourself

You can get a bad reputation and be called names like Slag

YOUR photo can go around the world in seconds

Your computer or phone may be confiscated by the police

Real life case study

A 14-year-old boy has been added to a police intelligence database after sending a naked picture of himself to a female friend, raising concerns that teenagers could become unfairly criminalised for innocent behaviour.

The boy, who has not been named, has been warned that if he ever applies for a job that required advanced criminal record checks, for example if he wanted to work with children, the incident could be “flagged”.

Police told him and his mother that they were now required to submit a crime report when investigating such matters, even if the person involved had not been arrested or charged.

The file, which records the crime as making and distributing an indecent image, will remain active for a minimum of ten years.

The teenager had taken an explicit photograph of himself in his bedroom and sent it to a girl he was “flirting with” via Snapchat on his mobile phone.

The popular app allows users to send pictures and videos that destruct a few seconds after they have been seen by the recipient.

But the images can be saved by taking a screenshot. And in this case, the girl shared it with friends, who eventually brought it to the attention of the school, in the north of England.

How could sending a nude picture affect your future?

Task

Create a poster or leaflet which explores the dangers of Snapchat misuse and sexting.

You could include:

- Top tips
- What is sexting
- Why personal safety is important
- How Snapchat could be misused